SEATTLE — The Central Area Development Association broke ground yesterday on the 17th & Jackson Project, the first mixed-use development to focus on west portions of the Jackson Street corridor, CADA said in a news release.

The $22.6 million project will incorporate 59 apartments, street level commercial space, community space, an art corridor and courtyards.

CADA said its goal is to enhance the economic vitality, livability and affordability of the Central Area Neighborhood.

Project partners are the city of Seattle, Enterprise Community Loan Fund, NeighborWorks America and Washington Mutual Bank.
